

INTEGRATING CALIFORNIA'S TRANSPORTATION FUTURE

The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) is kicking off the next phase of the California Interregional Blueprint. The California Interregional Blueprint will be the foundation of the next California Transportation Plan and will be responsive to SB 375 and AB 32 goals. Caltrans will host two workshops throughout the state to provide an opportunity for transportation professionals and stakeholders to determine:

- How we can work together to fully account for statewide greenhouse gas emissions in the transportation sector;
- What we should tell the Legislature and the California Transportation Commission in the 2012 CIB Interim Report, and;
- Issues that need to be considered in the next update of the California Transportation Plan.

The workshops feature informational presentations, large group discussions, and electronic polling (so that everyone, including those on webcast, can instantly see the group's responses to questions posed).

Join US! The workshop dates, times, and locations are listed below. RSVP is required. The workshops will also be webcast on the internet. Both in-person and webcast participants will be included in interactive polling exercises. You can register for the workshops either in-person or via webcast by registering online at <http://www.dot.ca.gov/hq/tpp/californiainterregionalblueprint/index.html>.
